"The Best in the Weld"

QUALITY, HEALTH & SAFETY

Quality

Allweld Marine is committed to achieving and maintaining the highest standards of quality in all our machining, welding and project management operations. Our aim is to fully understand the requirements of each customer and to exceed their expectations through maintaining the highest international standards.

We measure the achievement of continuous improvement through our internal systems, operational audits and external third-party audits. All of our documented processes, systems and management reviews form the basis of Allweld Marine's Quality Management System that is accredited to ISO 9001:2008 through the South African Bureau of Standards.

Health and Safety

We are committed to conducting our business in a manner that protects the safety and health of our employees, contractors, customers and the public. We place the highest priority on the safety and health of our workforce, in the communities where we operate, on the environment and on the efficiency of our operations. We will strive for an incident-free workplace and believe that our commitment to safe, secure and incident-free operations will contribute to improved operations, lower costs, improved employee morale and consequently higher productivity.

Allweld Marine focuses on leadership accountability, since strong leaders are essential for sustained injury and fatality prevention. The nature of our industry has influenced our leaders to focus and enforce our safety system and processes that have resulted in our excellent safety record.

Our Quality, Safety and Health Management Systems are supported by fully documented policies and procedures that have been inculcated into our entire workforce and is constantly updated and driven by our interaction with our customers, contractors, communities and suppliers.
